Industrial and interdisciplinary applications of suspensions: Graham Lecture and Symposium 2019

Tuesday 9 July 2019, SCI, London, UK

Synopsis

The meeting will cover new advances in the science of suspensions, with a focus on real-world applications, be they industrial or geological. The lecture programme will conclude with the Graham Lecture, to be presented by Professor Wilson Poon of the University of Edinburgh. In addition to hearing great presentations and the opportunity to contribute a poster, there is plenty of scope for networking to catch up with old friends and make new ones.

Attendees

The meeting will be of interest to both industrial and academic researchers, particularly those from colloid chemistry, soft matter physics and chemical engineering backgrounds interested in understanding, designing or applying suspensions.

This meeting showcases outstanding soft matter scientists describing some of their recent research addressing real-world applications with excellent science. The programme was constructed by Professor Wilson Poon of Edinburgh University.

Call for Posters

Opportunities are available for a limited number of posters. Interested applicants should send an abstract of one A4 page or 300 words maximum, indicating title and authors, to conferences@soci.org by Tuesday 9 June 2019 with the subject line "Graham Lecture - poster submission". Poster contributions from Early Career Colloid Scientists are particularly encouraged.
